'American Superstars' Shine

By Hilary L. Green

Unless you are able to spend a great deal of time in Las Vegas, you may not be able to see all of the shows you would like to see. With this in mind, "American Superstars" at Stratosphere is a marvelous choice. It is one of the hottest tribute shows around, in which talented performers honor some of the most popular stars in the music business.

Stars such as Elvis Presley, portrayed by Darren Lee, and Madonna, brought to the stage by Coty Alexander, are presented in this fast-paced, high-energy show. Featuring one of the best bands in town, each number is expertly staged and choreographed with the exceptional "Superstar" dancers: line captain Amy Warren, Kristen James, Debra Allen, Nicci Abram and Kathy Magee.

"American Superstars" also features Sandy Taggart's characterization of Latin singer Gloria Estefan, Damian Brantley's portrayal of Michael Jackson, Johnny Potash's tribute to Charlie Daniels and the newest addition to the cast, Michael Colby, with his popular presentation of Ricky Martin. Colby's limited engagement has been so well-received that he is now a permanent member of the cast.

Producers Mark Callas and Donny Lee Moore are proud of their "American Superstars" production at Stratosphere. They work hard at keeping their show fresh and new and including stars that the audience asks for. They invest a great deal of time and energy in searching for the right performers for "Superstars," holding auditions all over the country. Cast members must not only look like the celebrities they are honoring but sound just like them. Callas and Moore believe this sets their show apart from other tribute shows.

"We are bringing the best performers of this generation to the stage, and the entertainers we have portraying these superstars do a remarkable job," says Callas. "We have worked the show to be even more in tune with today's global audience by focusing on acts that are making an impact now and who will continue to do so in the coming years."
